

darksatiristblogger

Wowowowowow today has been insane to a mind-boggling, unbelievable extent -

There was the Wall Demonstration on Campus, there was taking down Hillel morons, there was the film screening, and THEN there was the talk with my professor regarding that project I mentioned, which has turned into a much larger project that I am SUPER excited about and will eventually talk about here once some certain things are taken care of, and then there was an offer by my professor for me to join her and a delegation that she is taking to Palestine on a 10-Day trip [I'll already be there anyways], during which we will be visiting with prominent figures associated with the Palestinian Resistance movement, as well as ex-Palestinian Detainees, including women who were held during the Lebanese War for 17 YEARS in a very brutal Israeli prison

But most of all

The thing that has me fangirling and going crazy is

That as long as I can take care of some border/transportation issues

I WILL GET TO MEET LEILA KHALID

Like

I'm still trying to wrap my mind around it but it is in the "extremely probable" realm, and just

/breath

Also, I have already picked out my Senior Thesis Topic and am in the process of acquiring a grant to work with a group on what I have planned, but that's not quite something I can really discuss yet [but trust me, I want to]

I woke up this morning thinking it would be just another shitty Wednesday

But just

LEILA KHALID

#Sorry #I'm super excited #and sleep deprived #I've been on campus for way too long

34 notes

